GENUINE LEATHER

Genuine leather embodies a unique blend of natural attributes that distinguish it as a prized material in our lighting collection. Just as minor imperfections are inherent in glass and other materials, genuine leather showcases its own natural flaws, each contributing to its individual charm and character.

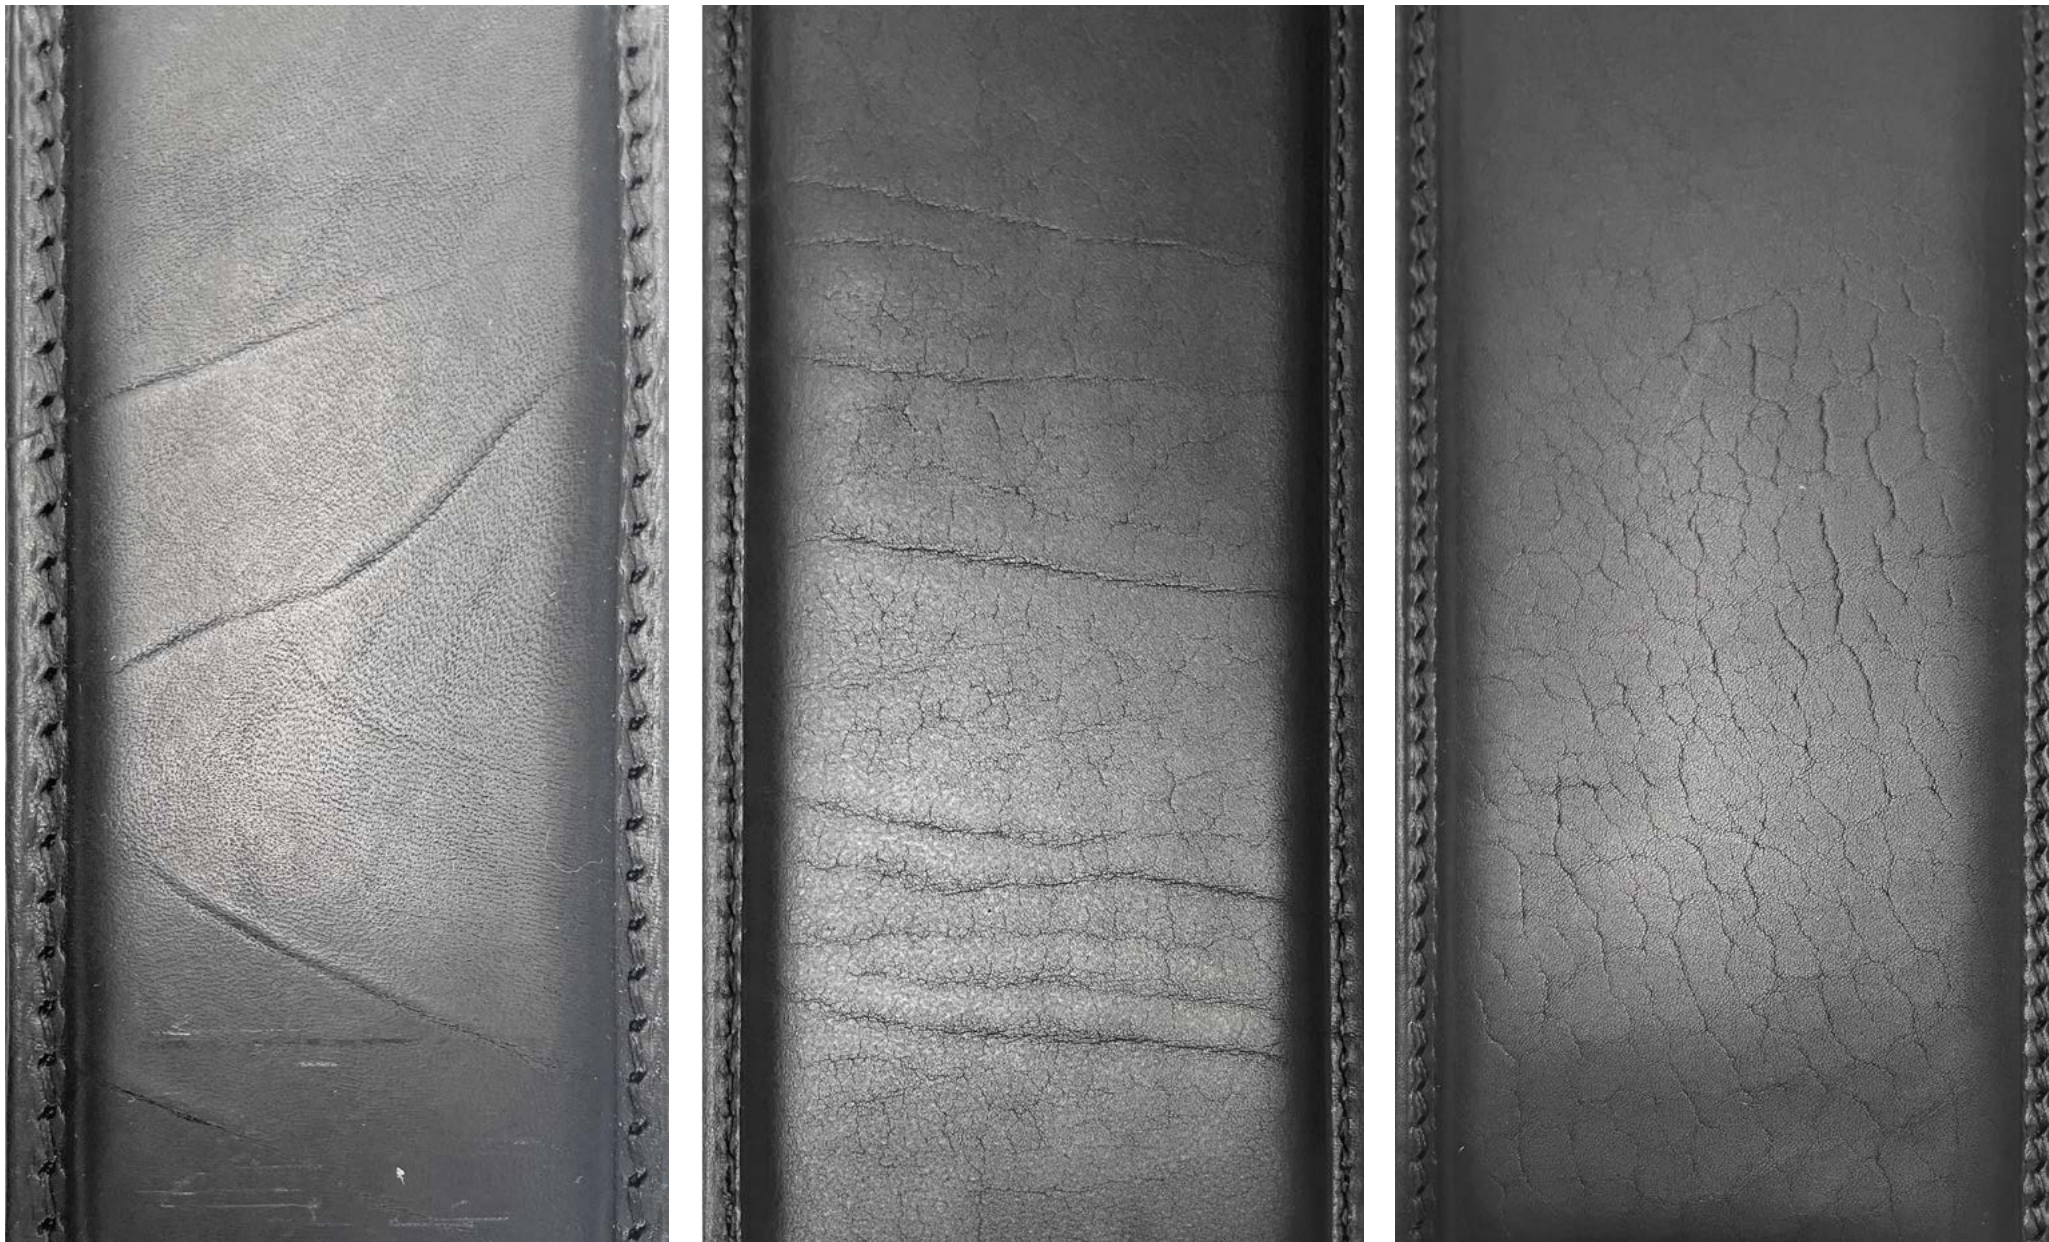

As advocates of craftsmanship, we believe that these imperfections add to the beauty and authenticity of leather, underscoring its organic origins and artisanal worth. We are also deeply committed to minimising waste and maximising the use of materials, recognising the inherent value and beauty in every piece of genuine leather we work with.

SMALL CRACKS

Small cracks in cow leather sheets are a natural result of ageing and wear. As leather ages, it loses its original oils through evaporation, especially if not regularly conditioned, leading to brittleness and cracking. This is a normal part of leather's lifecycle.

WRINKLES

Wrinkles in leather are a natural outcome of ageing and use. With regular use and flexing, the leather's fibres adjust and wrinkles form. This process is entirely normal and adds to the leather's unique character and charm over time.
